

Atari 2600 Label Variations

This Atari 2600 label list is a compilation of input from many collectors in the field. A lot of hard work has been given by these collectors. You know who you are, and are too many to list. I thank you for everything you've done. Since this list is a joint effort, it will be available for all to use. It is a shame that when you input something, you are not fit to use it. So make a copy for yourself or ask me for one. I tell you to do this, so the list does not vanish in case something ever happens to me or my website. To update this list on my website, contact me at pdispenza@verizon.net. I will try and correct any mistakes and add any new info as I come across it. I've compiled a new and improved list from the one you've seen throughout the years. I've also made it much simpler to use. Any questions or comments, just contact me. I'm always on the Atari Age website as Philflound and that is also my AIM name.

Rarity is going to be based on the label variation of the cartridge, not the game itself. There are many websites and guides that give the rarity of the carts, so it is just duplicate info you don't need. I am giving rarity 3 grades along with a (?) grade. There may be more than one grade for variations. For example, Combat has 26 variations listed at this time. 2 of these are Common, 9 Uncommon, and 15 Rare. Common of course will be the least expensive versions to find, Rare should be the most expensive. A (?) means I do not have enough data to determine how rare a label variation is, or if it even exists. My estimates are guesses. On the rarest games, a common will be given if only one label is known, or if more than one label is known, but are about equal in occurrence. No prices will be given here, but will be the sole judgment of each individual to determine. I may question the existence of a variation if it is possible to make. Such as having an end label of a later version glued on to an older version of the game. Be wary on these types of variations, though they may be legitimate.

A "*" after the entry means that I have a scan of this particular label variation available. Scans are now available on the videogamevariations.com website. If there is a particular variation with the cartridge itself in general, then I will show a scan of the carts. For example, Data Age with the rough surface, smooth surface, and casting mark; Apollo with the width of the company molded; Coleco with the "MADE IN..." molded in back, and the various M Network mold variations. This will be done because the labels themselves may be identical, but the variant lies in the mold. PAL notations on 3rd party software will be noted in the entry only if there is a PAL designation somewhere on the cartridge. That means that a cartridge could be PAL, even if there is no designation in the entry or on the cartridge.

Rarity: Common (C) – this would be found 6 out of 10 times
Uncommon (U) – this would be found 3 out of 10 times
Rare (R) – this would be found 1 out of 10 times, if that Unknown (?) – cannot determine the rarity

Abbreviations:

ML: = main label
EL: = end label
Cart: = the actual plastic cartridge
Typo: = typographical error

Manuals: I've added instruction manuals to the list. This is what I've seen or had in my possession. There will probably be much more than what I have so far, so again, if you have something that is not listed, please give me a scan of all pages if possible including covers. Page count listed does include covers and any unnumbered pages if they are numbered within the manual. Page count given will be individual pages, though the manual may not be stapled, and folds open to create one or two large pages, which I'll try to note. Logically, if something is Rev 3 or C, then there should be 2 or 3 others before it. Some manuals did not have a Rev listed, meaning that this would be the first version and a Rev 1 should be the second printing.

Color given on the manual is for the front cover, most likely the outside background of any photos or drawings shown. I am not going to give rarities for this section, just listing for information.

Boxes: Boxes listed will be all versions that the cartridges came in, with a possibility that it was released in a bag instead of box. Copyright year will be listed first, along with the general color of the front of the box. Some boxes may have a Rev listed, usually found on the little flap at the top or bottom of the box. Variations of the box may be noted if there is something significantly different with a photo, sticker, or such. Printed and Made in countries will be listed. Most box sizes are standard with Atari games, but odd shaped such as larger, smaller, or thinner may be noted, especially if there is more than one size for a particular game. Again, no rarities will be given for boxes, just informational purposes. Also, if there are specific years made on a cartridge label, say 1982 and 1987, then logic should say that there should be two boxes for the same years, or close to them. So if you see several labels with different years, but don't see several boxes listed, try and do some detective work and find out if there are boxes not listed. With Atari and Sears, there seems to be four box variations with the physical construction of the box. The early games were released originally in a book type opening box where the front of the box opens to view the contents. There are three other types of boxes. The first is standard opening of the box from the top flap, where the whole top flap tucks into the box. The bottom flap also tucks into the box. The second version is glued on both top and bottom, and there is a hang tag glued to the top of the back of the box. This little hang tag tucks into a slot on the top flap. There is a new third version that I discovered with Video Olympics, and may be on others. It is a glued top flap that is similar to a cereal box with a tab. I'm going to call this the tab flap style box.

So when labeling the boxes, you will see book style opening box, standard flap style box, glued flap style box, and tab flap style box. If none of these are listed, then I have not personally seen the box and would need collector input to list it correctly.

Another thing that we recently discovered is that several titles have boxes that were printed in the same year, but by two different companies. The years range about 1980-81 so far. We've only discovered a few titles, and some only have one company that we know of so far in that particular variation. Superman has both companies with the same box with one very slight difference (see Superman section). Adventure we found had both companies making the same box with no difference. We've also discovered Asteroids had one of the companies and Combat had both, though on 2 different versions. The companies that have printed boxes are Bertco Graphics, Aopak San Francisco, Ivy Hill, and Shorewood Packaging so far. Company info is found on the bottom tiny flaps. Anytime I run across any of these companies on the flaps, I will list it in the information of the box version. If anyone finds boxes that have any of these companies printed on them that I have not designated in the listing here, please contact me and let me know so I can add it.

ATARI

There are many different label variations for Atari. Early labels were text, then went on to pictures with a black background. From there, the picture had a silver background, which became a dull grey after that. They then went to a reddish brown background label. There are also exceptions to the rules on special labels for outside licensed games such as Peanuts, Disney, and Sesame Street, along with a couple of others that will be noted.

Label type

1st txt - ML: large letters. EL: 2 numbers before name.

2nd txt - ML: small letters. EL: no numbers before name.

3rd txt - ML: game program now has slanted "e".

1/2 txt - special combo of one type of text on main label, and another on end label.

2/3 txt - special combo of one type of text on main label, and another on end label.

PicBr1 – Similar to PicSil1, but background is brown (much darker than red labels). Atari 2600 is above photo in the center.

PicBr2 – Similar to PicSil2, but background is brown (much darker than red labels). Atari 2600 is in the upper right corner.

Yellow – Sesame Street licensed games have yellow labels.

Blue – Disney licensed games have blue checkered labels.

Red – Peanuts licensed games have red checkered labels.

Purple – Muppets licensed games have purple labels.

PRO - prototype

P - PAL format. These are non-US versions. A “p” is usually on the end label, and in some cases on the main label. Please note that if a label exists in both NTSC and PAL, but there is NO difference between the two labels, there will be only one listing, though we may note it as both NTSC and PAL in the description. Also, we are not going to note a cartridge as PAL unless it has a “p” somewhere on the label, or a “p” sticker denoting it as PAL. So, it’s possible that a variation only exists in PAL format, but it won’t be listed as such. Do not assume a listing as being NTSC.

ACTIVISION

NOTE: The first 6 games: Boxing, Bridge, Checkers, Dragster, Fishing Derby, and Skiing had versions with foam covering the circuit board. Each of these carts has 4 teeth holding the foam into place. Removing the foam would create a “variation” of 4 teeth in the cart mold. These will not be listed since they can be made by removing the foam. There are 4 other games which never had foam, but had the 4 teeth mold variation. These are Freeway, Kaboom!, Laser Blast, and Tennis. These are true variations and will thus be noted as such. It has been brought to my attention that these versions were probably left over casings and are rarer than versions with no teeth.

APOLLO

There is a cartridge variation for the GAMES BY APOLLO molded on the back. Where "GAMES BY" is .85" long and "APOLLO" is 1.6" long, this is considered small molded letters. "GAMES BY" is 1" long and "APOLLO" is 1.8" long, this is considered large molded letters. There is also a variation on the 2 posts that go into the Atari unit. A notched post has a semi-circular notch in it, and a square post is perfect with no notch in it.

M NETWORK (MATTEL)

The M Network cartridges are shaped much differently than other Atari games. They consist of two parts, the long cartridge part which holds the circuit board, and a wide base, which is made to fit into the Atari 2600 system cartridge slot.

There are 9 different cartridge types for M Network games. The descriptions cover the cartridge itself. It will refer to the long skinny part. There are also versions with "M Network" molded into the plastic of the base, and will be so noted in the actual label variations.

- v1. CART: snap piece: This cart has a 2.5" x 2.5" square piece in the back that is not part of the main cart, and snaps into place. "© MATTEL INC" is near the base.
- v2. CART: line at base: This cart has a raised line near the base on the back. No © on cartridge.
- v3. CART: line at grips: This cart has a raised line on the back, up towards the label, parallel to the grips. No © on cartridge.
- v4. CART: Mattel at grips: This cart has "© MATTEL INC" on the back up towards the label, parallel to the grips.
- v5. CART: Mattel at base-small ©: This cart has a small "© MATTEL INC" near the base on back. "MATTEL INC is 18mm long. © is even with "MATTEL INC"
- v6. CART: Mattel at base-small Mattel round ©: This cart has "© MATTEL INC" near the base on back, "MATTEL INC" is 17mm long. The c in © is round. The © is almost level with the words "MATTEL INC"
- v7. CART: Mattel at base-small Mattel stretched ©: This cart has "© MATTEL INC" near the base on back. "MATTEL INC" is 16mm long. The c in © is elongated.
- v8. CART: Mattel at base-large Mattel round ©: This cart has "© MATTEL INC" near the base on back. "MATTEL INC" is 19mm long. The c in © is round.

SEARS

Note: Many cartridges had both text and picture versions released. The picture version is usually harder to find. All games are relatively hard to find compared to their Atari counterparts, short of Target Fun and possibly Asteroids or Pac-Man. There are also some text labels, both main and end, that seem to fade and leave a "blacker" box around the colored text. My guess is that these have a second printing, where the white text with black background is laid down first, then the colored text with black background is laid down on top of that. This would give a 2nd layer of black background and thus, the parts of the label with only 1 layer will fade and give the black box look. Upon looking closely at one of the "non-box" versions I own, upon close inspection, I can faintly see a black box on the end label. I'm guessing that this was corrected by printing a black background down first, then do the white text, then do the colored text. This would give 3 layers of black background and prevent it from fading. This is only a theory. The only other thing I can think of is that the labels that aren't faded were not exposed to light or the elements, or exposed so little that it did not affect the label, but could in the future. If anyone can come up with a better explanation, please contact me. I've considered putting this as a variation, but after thinking about why this may happen, have decided not to at this time. If other relevant information comes forward where I can truly place this as a variation, then this will change in the future.

U.S. GAMES / VIDTEC

There seems to be a variation on at least some of the square cartridges. There are 2 different versions of the notches. The first is a perfectly square notch with 3 lines protruding along the bottom of the notch. The second version has a notch that thins toward the point and only has 1 line protruding along the bottom. So far I have not found a variation on the fancy cartridges.
